Rivers of Women: The Play Shirley Bradley LeFlore

Rivers of Women is a play by Shirley Bradley LeFlore that is based on some of her most prolific works of poetry rooted in the stories and voices of women. A poet and oral performer, LeFlore has created a composition of music, poetry and dance created for the stage. Performed by an all female cast, this poignant, heartfelt, humorous and powerful play explores family, love, woman-to-woman experiences, race and religion. In all, it is a descriptive, evocative, lyrical production filled with folk sentiments, conjuring familiar images that seem to be more the craft of an urban anthropologist than a poet, which is clearly the genius of LeFlore's art. Rivers of Women marks the directorial debut of bestselling author and producer, Lyah Beth LeFlore, the poet's daughter. www.riversofwomen.com
